BOY MANGLED

WILL GILLIGAN, CATHEDRAL SCHOOL CADET, RUN DOWN BY TROLLEY CAR. LEAPED FROM A WAGON DIRECTLY INTO THE JAWS OF DEATH.

WHEELING, May 21.—Shortly after 12 o'clock Friday, William Gilligan, an 11-year-old boy, was struck by a Wheeling Traction company car in front of the City High school and injured so seriously that it is feared that death may result.

The lad attends the Cathedral High school and was going home to dinner, riding on the rear of a wagon. At Twenty-first street the wagon turned to go down Main street, and the boy, wishing to continue on down towards his home at No. 2333 Market street, where his mother, Mrs. Katherine Gilligan, conducts a grocery, leaped from the wagon, directly in front of the swiftly-moving North-bound car, and was caught beneath the wheels and dragged for a distance of probably 60 feet before the motorman succeeded in bringing the car to a stop. His right leg was horribly crushed and almost severed from the body, and in addition there were other injuries of a most serious nature inflicted. Bits of flesh plastered the running gear.

Doctor Best happened to be passing the spot at the time of the accident and took the injured lad immediately to the City hospital, where it was stated that amputation of the leg would be necessary and an operation was immediately begun. The result of the operation cannot be foretold, but young Gilligan is said to be in a very critical condition and death may be the result of the accident.

The car was Fair ground car No. 36, north bound, and in charge of Conductor Gieseler and Motorman Bert Maziney. The manner in which the accident occurred is said to reflect no blame on the motorman, as it happened too quickly to be avoided, but passengers on the car at the time are loud in their denunciation of the car fender.

This fender is of the usual variety with which the traction cars in this city are equipped, and are proven to be absolutely useless, as the boy was not picked up by it but was knocked down under the car. It is claimed that the fender was attached to a chain as most of them are, and it was thus impossible for the fender to become lowered by the impact and thus pick up the body and save it from going under the wheels.

Drift of Population to the Cities.

No tendency of modern times has caused so much uneasiness in the minds of social philosophers and reformers as the drift of the population from the rural districts to the cities. That this tendency is deplorable is admitted on all hands, but there is no general agreement as to what should be done to discourage it. Recently, however, public speakers and writers have been insisting that the way to keep the bright young men and women on the farms is to ameliorate the conditions of country life. The extension of telephone lines into the country, and the rural free mail delivery are steps in that direction; but the general improvement of the country roads would be a far more important step. Bad roads do more than anything else to promote ignorance, isolation, discouragement and disgust among the country people. Good roads promote attendance at school and the church; they make social gatherings, literary societies, dramatic entertainments, and club and lodge meetings possible during the winter and spring. With bad roads the farmer is compelled to hibernate, socially, for three or four months in the year. With good roads, these months become the most pleasant, and, in some respects, the most profitable in the year.

The improvement of the country roads is now recognized as one of the greatest questions before the American public, and it is coming to be recognized as a question which concerns not merely the rural population, but the whole people.—Automobile Topics.

A correspondent gives details of the amazing collection of jewels in the Sultan's treasury. The turbans of all the Sultans since Mahomet II. are there. There are also the royal throne of Persia, carried off by the Turks in 1514, and covered with more than 20,000 rubies, emeralds and fine pearls, and also the throne of Suleiman I. from the dome of which there hangs over the head of the Caliph an emerald six inches long and four deep. These two thrones are the chief objects of the collection.

British automobilists are discarding the words "chauffeur" and "garage" for "motorman" and "motorhouse." The former are far too Frenchy. But on the other hand, "motorman" in this country is pre-empted by the street railway. The Britons, however, will call this Americanism and go on in their insularity.

The old English inns are fast passing away. The "King of Prussia" hostelry at Finchley was recently torn down. It had been running since 1757, and the license had been continuously in the hands of one family since that time. The old "Plover," at Kingsbury Green, is said to be 850 years old, and the "King James," at Endfield, 990 years old.

Students of Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., have decided to wear flannel shirts and corduroy trousers on three days of each week. They want to prove that they are not "Gades."

The largest stone-arch bridge in the world is now in course of erection at Plauen, Saxony. This bridge will have a span of 295 feet, exceeding by 20 feet the famous Luxembourg bridge opened last year, and by still more the Morbegno bridge in Lombardy and the Cabin John bridge near Washington, D. C., which have held in turn the record as the longest stone arch bridges.
